

RAFFAELE SALZANO

Raffaele Salzano, Drummer:

An Italian kid, born in Newark, N.J., and lived in Union, N.J. as a kid, listened to music like Sinatra, Presley, etc... Then moved on to Zeppelin, Beatles, Stones, and Woodstock bands in the 60's. I started playing drums at the dinner table on my mother's dinnerware until she stopped me with a wooden spoon. My first kit was a Slingerland. We eventually moved to Southern Florida in the 70's when the Bee Gees, Southern rock and Motown pop was out. I took a trip to Philly in the 80's and was a part of a big working band and played all hair band songs with my new Tama Fibrestar 7 piece concert kit with no bottom heads. Came back to South Florida in the 90's and went back to Classic rock, Southern rock, Country and Blues. I now play on a 5piece DW kit, always Zildjian cymbals and also the drummer in metal rock music with Loud Angel. Life is good!
